

SICK OF RACISM.

Organizing Against Racism

CUPE 3902 Sick of Racism Campaign

We often face racism as individuals, in interpersonal settings. This can make it seem like racism is something that we need fight as individuals, in isolated moments. The reality is that while racism can often manifest itself on the individual level, it is rooted in institutional and systemic contexts. The best way to fight racism has always been to get organized. It is important to know that you are not alone and there are many people fighting against racism on campus, in your union and in the community.

* The following lists are partial and is not intended to be comprehensive or dismiss the work of organizations within the city organizing against racism. If you do not see your group listed, but would like to, please get in touch.*

Justice for Migrant Workers

SICK OF RACISM.

Justicia for Migrant Workers (J4MW) is a volunteer driven political non-profit collective comprised of committed activists from diverse walks of life (including labour activists, educators, researchers, students and youth of colour) based in Toronto, Ontario and now in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada. We are engaged in this work alongside our personal commitments and numerous social justice struggles. J4MW strives to promote the rights of migrant farmworkers (participating in the Canadian Seasonal Agricultural Workers Program and the Low Skilled Workers Program) and farmworkers without status. Promoting workers rights entails fighting for spaces where workers themselves can articulate their concerns without losing their work or being repatriated. We start with workers' knowledge and concerns and collectively devise strategies to make necessary changes. We see ourselves as allies and strive for a movement that is led and directed by workers themselves.
